INTRODUCTION

In Hinduism we can see, there are different incarnations of gods and goddesses. Each power is to reveal certain things related to the human life cycle. Even a few organs in our body are somewhat relatable to animal features and god's features. Here, in this topic I describe my research on uterus and god Ganesha.

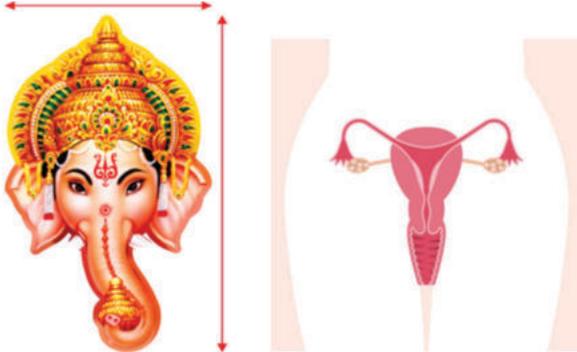

Why do people pray to Lord Ganesha particularly for a baby (those who wish to have a baby)?

First thing is as we know the peepal tree (FICUS RELIGIOSA). There can be several reasons for worshipping peepal tree. Based on health benefits it is also treated for gonorrhoea, bone fractures, to get pregnant and so on. Mostly in Hinduism the peepal tree can be found in God Ganesha's temple. A childless couple prays to Lord Ganesha and peepal tree together to get pregnant.

In Spirituality

In my research childless couples pray to Lord Ganesha is just similar to praying to the uterus.

Because, the uterus and Lord Ganesha's face will be just similar to each other.

As well Sri Chakra can be related to all the human organs. The triangle shape of Sri Chakra and the organ shape will be somewhat similar.

While they pray their complete focus will be on the uterus by praying Lord Ganesha. Here psychosymbology takes place.

1. Focusing on organ
2. Reviewing
3. Meditation or just imagining the picture of (Lord Ganesha in the form of uterus)

These steps take place.

In some parts of India people would offer bananas and coins for the elephant in the Hindu temple and as same they offer to Lord Ganesha too. Here are the similarities of elephant and Ganesha. The elephant can be found in many Hindu temples in India.

As much as I observe, human organs are related to Indian gods in Hinduism. Lord Ganesha and uterus is one of the comparisons.
